These are the "Dance of Nymphs," "Goddess of the Moon," the "Baby's Bath," the "War Hero," "Love's Dream" and "Faust and Marguerite." The perfection with which "Fighting the Flames' is presented far surpasses the tire show of last year. VIEWS OF COLUMBIA SENIORS

AS TO EACH OTHER AND AS TO THINGS IN GENERAL.

Roy, the Tennis Player, Is the Best Student-Dune Browne Did Nost for the College- siree Men Married-Class Day Exercises to He Held To-morrow.

The class of 1905, Columbia College, will have its class day exercises to-morrow. Class day is by no means a serious function. Old jests of freshman year are brought out and furbished up. Personal allusions un-derstood only of the few earn their little bit of applause, and withal class day is a jolly festivity. Coarsely expressed, it has commencement beat to a pulp.

The president of the class, Duncan H. Browne, earned distinguished honors in his final year as the great arbitrator. As chairman of the student board of representatives, he had all the unpleasant details of reconciling the students to the action of Dr. Butler in suspending four sophomores for being shot at by Kingdon Gould. Robert Le Roy, better known as the intercollegiate tennis champion, is, notwithstanding his athletic connection, the best student in the class. He is the valedictorian.

Chester W. Cuthell, whose sonorous voice will soon be rolling between the hills about the Hudson near Poughkeepsie, as he MME. steers the varsity eight, will use that same voice in giving down the class prophecy Cuthell has been coxswain of the crew for three years past, and has been a member of the champion basketball team. Chalmers Wood, Jr., another athlete, was selected as the grouchiest man in the class, as well as presentation orator, and he is going to get even on class day. J. J. Frank wrote the class poem and Gustavus A. Younger the class history. Younger and William F. J Piel, the editor-in-chief of the senior class book, have formed a mutual admiration society, and by agreement each has managed to say the nicest things possible about the other in the history and in the class book.

Teddie Cooper was voted the luckiest man in the class. Cooper was married in the middle of his junior year. For some biggest "fusser," although to most minds he would be considered the biggest and most successful. J. P. Gillespie, who also is a married man, did not receive any votee An act in the big ring over the lake which for these offices. The third benedick is alleged to be known only to William F. J Piel, and he has not given any information about him.

James A. Taylor, the vew tree orator. was chosen by all odds the most popular man in his class. Taylor was elected as the best all-round man, the best athlete the most popular, tied with Duncan H. Browne for first for having done most for the class, and was second to Browne for having done most for Columbia. Browne massed a whole lot of honors. Dunc-footbail tackle, actor, orator and twice class president—was declared to have done most for Columbia, to be the second best athlete, the second best all-round man, the second best natured, the second most popular and was beaten by Cuthell for second luckiest. Chick Cuthell was chosen third best athlete and third most repular man.

william Ferdinand Joseph Piel, or just Billy, carried off a lot of the choice dis-tinctions. Because of unfortunate ten-dencies of his freshman year he earned a reputation for noisiness that earned him a reputation for noisiness that earned him the election as the noisiest man in the class. Piel took first prize as the best bluffer and as the man most likely to succed.

William A. Tilt, the pool champion of The Strollers and of the New York Athletic Club, was regarded as by all means the biggest sport in the class. Tilt's sporting blood showed in the clothes that he wore, some considering them loud and others regarding them as quite the correct thing. The opinions were so well divided that Tilt was elected the loudest dressed and the best dressed as well. Stuyve Pierrepont was second in the last named competition.

was elected the loudest dressed and the best dressed as well. Stuyve Pierrepont was second in the last named competition. In another branch of the life strenuous, Chalmers Wood, Jr., was elected the first. He was by all odds the biggest "fusser" in the class. It must be a sad blow to Chalmers Wood, Sr., who was graduated nearly thirty years ago and who is to be a graduate marshal at the commencement, to see what a reputation his son has.

The average age of the class of '05 college is 21 years and 4 months. Forty-five are Republicans in politics, 14 Democrats. In and 31 have no politics. The vocations are divided as follows: Law. 20; business, 15; mechanical engineering, 7; ministry, 6; medicine, 5; teaching, 9; broker, 3; chemistry, 2; forestry and literature, 1 each. Just twenty-three have no idea of going to work. There are 20 Episcopalians in the class, 13 Presbyterians, 11 Hebrews, 5 Baptists, 2 Catholics, 2 Lutherans, 3 Universalists, 2 Catholics, 2 Lutherans, 3 Universalists, 3 Dutch Reformed, 1 agnostic, and 25 who make no pretense of having a religion.

The favorite athletic sport was voted to be football, with rowing and tennis next in popularity. Dr. Herbert G. Lord, who said that gambling wasn't a sin, was selected the most popular professor, with Dr. George C. D. Odell second and Prof. Farrand third. The favorite study, however, was not psychology, taught by Dr. Lord, but history, whose instructors did not place for popularity. Literature, Dr. Odell's subject, was second, and economics finished third.

Of for a Week at Peekskill in the New Olive Brown Uniforms. Seventh Regiment, 800 strong and clad in the new olive brown service uniform. left this city yesterday morning for the State camp near Peekskill. Assembly sounded in the armory at 9 o'clock, and a few minutes later the regiment, with the band out in front playing for all it was worth, marched to the Grand Central Station and filled two sections of thirteen cars each. It was the first time since 1848, the officers said, that the regiment had worn any other uniform than the gray that has always been associated with it, but in the new uniforms it was still the same Dandy Seventh that marched out of the armory with its company distances correct to the inch.

Everything was brown—the campaign hats, the blanket rolls, haversacks, canteens, belts and shoes, even the rifle slings. The officers were clad in the same dull uniforms, but their leather puttees, gold hat cords and swords distinguished them.

In a roll over the shoulder, taking the place of the old knapsack, were overcoats, blankets, bed sack and poncho. A meat can, knife, fork and spoon, one ration and two changes of underclothes were stowed in the haversacks, with toilet articles, pipes and tobacco tucked away in the corners.
